

Event in Support of Refugees from Syria (2015)

Abstract

In 2015/2016, over one million refugees, migrants and other people seeking protection arrived in Germany. In 2015, the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees (BAMF) registered around 890,000 people seeking protection, many of whom had fled from the civil war in Syria. By 2018, over 70% of refugees from Syria seeking asylum in Germany have gained residency permits granting them the right to work. Today, close to one million people who fled from Syria live in Germany. A growing number of refugees from Syria who have settled in Germany have also been naturalized. In 2021 alone, about 19.100 Syrians gained German citizenship.
