

“A Cannibal Dance at the Leipzig Zoological Garden” (1885)

Abstract

---

The full caption of this original drawing by Fritz Waibler reads “The Bella Coola Indians from America’s Northwest Coast in the Zoological Garden at Leipzig: A Cannibal Dance.” It shows members of the Bella Coola tribe (also called Nuxalk) who had been recruited in a part of today’s province of British Columbia and toured Germany as part of a Völkerschau. This scene depicts them performing a dance that, according to the caption, was part of a cannibalistic ritual.
