

A Comrade's “Safe-Conduct” Papers (February 14, 1885)

Abstract

In Germany, personal identity papers are called an Ausweis to this day. This facsimile shows a “counter”-Ausweis, issued not by state authorities but by the leadership of the outlawed Social Democratic Workers' Party (SPD). The party was eager to provide persecuted members with every assistance possible and the documentation needed to secure it. According to this document, Friedrich Heinke, a married sculptor, age 24, without children, was banished from Berlin and its surrounding territory on the basis of paragraph 28 of the Anti-Socialist Law, which provided for the imposition of a “minor state of siege” [kleine Belagerungszustand—a kind of martial law—in particular cities. Under this provision, Heinke had been banished from the imperial capital, Berlin. Issued in Dresden on February 14, 1885, this “safe-conduct” document asks all party comrades to provide whatever support they can to its bearer. It is signed by the leading figures in the party: Ignaz Auer, August Bebel, Carl Grillenberger, Wilhelm Hasenclever, and Wilhelm Liebknecht.

Source

Source: SPD identity card for a Social Democrat who had been expelled from Berlin. The card includes the signatures of the party leadership (1885).

bpk-Bildagentur, image number 0012799. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries).

Recommended Citation: A Comrade's "Safe-Conduct" Papers (February 14, 1885), published in:
German History in Documents and Images,
<<https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/forging-an-empire-bismarckian-germany-1866-1890/ghdi:image-1450>> [May 10, 2024].