

Caricature: “Politicking Coachmen” (1884)

Abstract

Entitled “Politicking Coachmen,” this caricature is a commentary on the penetration of politics into all levels of German society after universal manhood suffrage was introduced for the Reichstag elections of 1867 and 1871. Even lowly drivers [Kutscher] of horse-drawn carriages [Fiaker] now engaged in political discussions in the workplace or at leisure, often fueled by newspaper articles from the mass press and by alcohol.

Source

Source: “Politikisierende Fiakerkutscher” [“Politicking Coachmen”], sketch after an oil painting by H. Kotschenreuter. Die Gartenlaube (Leipzig), Jg. 32, Nr. 1 (1884), p. 17. Available online at Wikisource, https://de.wikisource.org/wiki/Die_Gartenlaube_\(1884\)/Heft_1/Heft_1)

Recommended Citation: Caricature: “Politicking Coachmen” (1884), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <<https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/forging-an-empire-bismarckian-germany-1866-1890/ghdi:image-5126>> [May 21, 2024].