

Election Day in the Bavarian Mountains (c. 1870)

Abstract

From the early 1870s on, the Catholic Center Party was the main political vehicle for the representation of Catholic interests in the Reichstag and in the parliaments of federal states where Catholics resided in larger numbers. But to be represented in Berlin or a state capital, Catholics first had to get their Center Party candidate elected, and that required adapting to the advent of mass politics in the age of universal male suffrage. Accordingly, we see a Bavarian Catholic priest campaigning in the foothills of Bavaria in an attempt to solicit support from rural voters on election day. Clearly, the pulpit alone was no longer enough to spread the Center's message.

Source

Source: "Wahltag im Bayerischen Gebirge" ["Election Day in the Bavarian Mountains"] (c. 1870). Wood engraving after a drawing by Julius Noerr.

bpk-Bildagentur, image number 20027830. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries).

© bpk

Recommended Citation: Election Day in the Bavarian Mountains (c. 1870), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/forging-an-empire-bismarckian-germany-1866-1890/ghdi:imagine-1340> [May 14, 2025].