

Mainz: Market in Front of the Cathedral (1840)

Abstract

As an archbishopric and the seat of an elector, Mainz had a long history as a religious center. That changed, however, when French revolutionary troops occupied Mainz in 1793. The city was secularized ten years later. After the Congress of Vienna, Mainz became part of the principality of Hesse-Darmstadt. This view of the city's market square is dominated by the Cathedral of St. Martin and St. Stephan, one of the of Rhineland's three imperial cathedrals. The other two could be found in Worms and Speyer. The architecture of these three cathedrals marked the highpoint of German Romanticism in the building arts. Lithograph after a drawing by Nicolas Chapuy (1790–1858), 1840.

Source

Source: bpk-Bildagentur, image number 00004768. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries)

© bpk

Recommended Citation: Mainz: Market in Front of the Cathedral (1840), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <<https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/from-vormaerz-to-prussian-dominance-1815-1866/ghdi:image-2479>> [May 19, 2024].