

“Modern Dress” (1862)

Abstract

The beginning of the women’s movement in the second half of the nineteenth century saw the growing involvement of women in social life, politics, and literature. It also saw some emancipated women adopt “male” clothing and habits, such as smoking. That such “unfeminine” behavior roused critics is evident in this caricature, which shows a male smoker asking a couple for a light. Both the man and the woman are smoking, and the two are dressed similarly in masculine attire. The dialogue unfolds as follows: (the couple) “How dare you size us up like this from head to toe?” The male smoker: “Begging your pardon, but I merely wanted to take the liberty of asking the gentleman for a light, so I was looking for a distinguishing mark in order not to trouble the lady.” Wood engraving by unknown artist, 1862.

Source

Source: bpk-Bildagentur, image number 20012229. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries).

© bpk / Dietmar Katz

Recommended Citation: “Modern Dress” (1862), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/from-vormaerz-to-prussian-dominance-1815-1866/ghdi:image-2242> [December 08, 2024].