

1933 Election Campaign: Reich President Paul von Hindenburg Leaves the Polling Station (March 5, 1933)

Abstract

Despite its best efforts, the NSDAP was unable to win an absolute majority on March 5, 1933. With 43.9 percent of the vote, it still needed the German National People's Party (DNVP) as a coalition partner. The Communists (KPD) won 12.3 percent—a comparatively small decline, under the circumstances, from the 16.9 percent it had won in the November elections of the preceding year. The Social Democratic Party (SPD) also retained a large portion of its votes, with 18.3 percent. Hitler's attempt to unite the German people had failed. On the other hand, two thirds of German voters had supported parties hostile to the republic, namely the NSDAP, the DNVP, and the KPD.

Source

Source: Elections to the 8th Reichstag in 1933. Reich President von Hindenburg leaves the polling station in Kanonierstraße. In the background Otto Meißner, the first to come out of the door. Berlin, March 5, 1933. Unknown photographer.

bpk-Bildagentur, image number 30013900.. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries).

Recommended Citation: 1933 Election Campaign: Reich President Paul von Hindenburg Leaves the Polling Station (March 5, 1933), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <<https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/nazi-germany-1933-1945/ghdi:image-1883>> [July 25, 2024].