

Berliner Tageblatt* Lists the Gay and Lesbian Bars Closed by the Berlin Police (March 4, 1933)

Abstract

The Nazi regime regarded homosexual men as enemies of the people, since their “unnatural sex acts” and “refusal to procreate” supposedly endangered the nation’s survival. The allegedly infectious “social epidemic” of homosexuality was to be completely eradicated. As an initial step toward this goal, the Nazis forced the widespread closure of gay and lesbian institutions. This news article from the March 4, 1933, edition of the Berliner Tageblatt lists the names of addresses of various Berlin night clubs closed by decree of the city’s chief of police.

Source

Source: “Night Clubs Closed.” Report in the Berliner Tagblatt of March 4, 1933, listing the gay and lesbian bars in Berlin that were closed by the Berlin police chief.

bpk-Bildagentur, image number 30013773. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries).

© bpk

Recommended Citation: Berliner Tageblatt Lists the Gay and Lesbian Bars Closed by the Berlin Police (March 4, 1933), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/nazi-germany-1933-1945/ghdi:image-2049> [July 03, 2024].