

Führer Pennant in the Berlin Olympic Stadium during the Olympic Games (1936)

Abstract

---

Under Joseph Goebbels's leadership, the Nazi regime staged the 1936 Olympic Games as a gigantic propaganda spectacle. The world was to be given a picture of the beauty, harmony, and strength of the new Germany. All controversial aspects of the regime, such as its antisemitic slogans and agitation, were forbidden during the duration of the games. Indeed, in order to placate world opinion, two "half-Jews," fencer Helene Mayer and ice hockey player Rudi Ball, were included as starters on the German team. All told, Germany under the swastika actually left a very positive impression on many foreign visitors and observers.

Source

---

Source: The Führer's standard in the Berlin Olympic Stadium during the 1936 Olympic Games, with the stadium towers in the background. Photo by Dr. Paul Wolff & Tritschler. bpk-Bildagentur, image number 30024509. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries).

© bpk / Wolff & Tritschler

Recommended Citation: Führer Pennant in the Berlin Olympic Stadium during the Olympic Games

---

(1936), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <<https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/nazi-germany-1933-1945/ghdi:image-2095>> [May 10, 2024].