

A Woman Discovers Her Son among Returning POWs at the Friedland Transfer Camp (October 1, 1955)

Abstract

The Soviets appear to have seriously underestimated the emotional significance of the POW issue. The return of the last prisoners from the Soviet Union was an immense political success for Chancellor Adenauer that brought him added prestige – a success that eluded the unsuccessful SED regime. In a survey conducted just after Adenauer's death in 1967, three-fourths of the respondents listed the return of the POWs as his greatest achievement.

Source

Source: Photo: Robert Lebeck.

bpk-Bildagentur, image number 30017992. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries).

© bpk

Recommended Citation: A Woman Discovers Her Son among Returning POWs at the Friedland Transfer Camp (October 1, 1955), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <<https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/occupation-and-the-emergence-of-two-states-1945-1961/ghdi:i> mage-2602> [March 22, 2025].