/In Krakow, the trial before a Polish court of those mainly responsible for the Auschwitz concentration camp has ended. The defendants are German camp guards or members of the German administrative staff. They were accused of unprecedented atrocities against the camp inmates, especially female prisoners.

/In total, almost 300,000 people of various nationalities perished in the Auschwitz concentration camp. The court sentenced 23 defendants to death, six to life imprisonment, ten to longer prison sentences and one was acquitted. The Auschwitz concentration camp remains as it stands today as a shameful memorial in lasting memory of its 300,000 victims.
