

Theoretical Firearms Instruction in a GDR School, Conducted by a Non-Commissioned Officer in the National People's Army (1975)

Abstract

In the Honecker era, “socialist military education” became increasingly important. Through the sponsorship of the People's National Army, the militarization of society started as early as kindergarten. Along with this, the Pioneer Organization “Ernst Thälmann” (named after the former head of Germany's Communist Party, who was murdered by the Nazis) and the Free German Youth sponsored various maneuvers and paramilitary competitions. The Society for Sport and Technology organized pre-military training for adolescents. Additionally, starting in the 1973–74 school year, ninth- and tenth-grade students at general polytechnic secondary schools had the option of participating in “military education” study groups. During the 1978–79 school year, military studies became a required subject for students in those grade levels.

Source

Source: Theoretical firearms instruction in a GDR School, conducted by a non-commissioned officer in the National People's Army, 1975. Photo: Edelgard Rehboldt.

bpk-Bildagentur, image number 30024601. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries).

© bpk/ Edelgard Rehboldt

Recommended Citation: Theoretical Firearms Instruction in a GDR School, Conducted by a Non-Commissioned Officer in the National People's Army (1975), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <<https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/two-germanies-1961-1989/ghdi:image-1485>> [April 24, 2024].