

All Advertisements in Vain (1965)

Abstract

During the 1960s, young people experimented with new types of lifestyles and experiences. In doing so, however, they encountered consistent opposition and attacks from members of the older generation and representatives of the state. These self-appointed champions of traditional conceptions of order polemicized against Beat music, “bums,” long hair on boys, and pants and short skirts on girls. This ironic photograph features a long-haired young man sitting in front of a barber shop. Photo by Günter Zint.

Source

Source: “All advertisements in vain”: long-haired youth in front of a barber shop. Date: 1965. Photo: Günter Zint.

bpk-Bildagentur, image number 30004853. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries).

© bpk/ Günter Zint

Recommended Citation: All Advertisements in Vain (1965), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <<https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/two-germanies-1961-1989/ghdi:image-116>> [April 26, 2024].