

Environmental Destruction and Air Pollution in the Ruhr Valley (1985)

Abstract

Water and air pollution in West Germany was only gradually reduced through prohibitions on waste discharge and the legally-mandated installation of modern filtering equipment. This photograph shows a coal-fired power plant, without desulfurization equipment, near Hamm an der Lippe in the Ruhr Valley. The consequences for the natural environment are obvious in this case: dying forests.

Source

Source: Coal-fired power plant near Hamm on the river Lippe – without desulfurization plant, 1985.

Image 2 of 2. Photo: Günter Zint.

bpk-Bildagentur, image number 30008404. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries).

© bpk / Günter Zint

Recommended Citation: Environmental Destruction and Air Pollution in the Ruhr Valley (1985), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <<https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/two-germanies-1961-1989/ghdi:image-91>> [March 10, 2026].