

The Border along Berlin's Spree River (no date)

Abstract

The border between the districts of Kreuzberg (West Berlin) and Friedrichshain (East Berlin) ran along the Spree. Although East Berlin controlled the entire width of the Spree at this point, the Wall occupied the river's eastern bank. Patrol boats, underwater chain-link fences, and ship barricades were used to create a water border with West Berlin, since boaters, swimmers, and scuba divers tried time and again to reach the West via the Spree. Photos by Klaus Lehnartz.

Source

Source: At the Oberbaumbrücke (bridge) the border along the Spree is closed off with underwater fencing (no date); barbed wire barriers mark the border in the Spree River (no date). Photos by Klaus Lehnartz.

bpk-Bildagentur, image numbers 30028964 and 30028965. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries).

© bpk / Klaus Lehnartz

Recommended Citation: The Border along Berlin's Spree River (no date), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/two-germanies-1961-1989/ghdi:image-2354> [December 07, 2024].