

The “Prague Spring” Comes to an End: Soviet Tanks in Prague (August 21, 1968)

Abstract

On the night of August 20–21, 1968, Warsaw Pact troops initially numbering about 300,000 (later reinforced to 500,000) occupied Czechoslovakia and violently ended the reforms implemented by Czechoslovak communists known as the “Prague Spring.” In bloody clashes between the invading forces and the civilian population, 72 Czechoslovaks were killed, 267 seriously injured, and 222 slightly injured by early September 1968. To justify the invasion, Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev proclaimed the so-called Brezhnev Doctrine on November 12, 1968: he claimed that the socialist states had only “limited sovereignty” and therefore there was not only the right but also the duty to intervene if socialism was threatened in one of these states. The picture shows a Soviet battle tank in the streets of Prague on August 21, 1968.

Source

Source: Tanks in the streets of Prague, August 21, 1968. Photo: Hilmar Pabel.

bpk-Bildagentur, image number 30015711. For rights inquiries, please contact Art Resource at requests@artres.com (North America) or bpk-Bildagentur at kontakt@bpk-bildagentur.de (for all other countries).

© bpk / Hilmar Pabel

Recommended Citation: The “Prague Spring” Comes to an End: Soviet Tanks in Prague (August 21, 1968), published in: German History in Documents and Images, <<https://germanhistorydocs.org/en/two-germanies-1961-1989/ghdi:image-2393>> [April 29, 2024].